

"If I'm so empowered, why do I need you?"

Defining Government's Role in Internet Electronic Commerce

Acknowledgements

In preparing this report, the Council received a great deal of assistance from experts in business, academia, and government. Some helped us define large issues, while others clarified for us some critical, technical matters.

We would especially like to thank those who provided extensive assistance: Steve Lucas, Match Logic; John Place, Yahoo; Steve Silverman and Winnie Wechsler, Buena Vista Internet Group; Annette Nellen, College of Business, San Jose State University; Lee Kercher and Martin LaFon, California Department of Information Technology; and David Wetmore, Washington DC Office of Governor Wilson; and Chris Holben, California Trade and Commerce Agency. Additionally, Joe Kraus of Excite and Tim Koogle of Yahoo helped us devise our issues list at our first meeting.

We would also like to thank a number of people who worked with us on some of the more complex technical and policy issues: Kent Lassman, Citizens for a Sound Economy; Jeffrey Eisenach, President of Progress & Freedom Foundation; Peter Uhlmann Office of US Representative Christopher Cox; P.K. Agarwal of the California Franchise Tax Board; Tom Moulton and Dennis LeBlanc, Pacific Bell; Angela Young, California Public Utilities Commission; Gary Jugum, California Board of Equalization; Michael Brownell, California Franchise Tax Board; Joe Rodota, California Virtual University; Dudley Nogg, Wells Fargo; Carol Sigmann, California Accountancy Board; Stephen Sands, California Board of Architectural Examiners; Virginia Taylor and Richard Elbrecht, California Department of Consumer Affairs; Mark Riley, Professor of Classics, California State University, Sacramento; Robert Pepper, Federal Communications Commission; George Vradenburg and Liz Blumenfeld, America Online; Shawn Bruce, National Auctioneers Association; Carole Grunberg, Office of Senator Wyden; Leon Kestenbaum, Sprint; Dan Kostenbauder, Hewlett Packard; Bill Bass, Forrester Research; Joe Panepinto, FamilyPC Magazine; Kaye Caldwell, CommerceNet; and Doug Laue, California Medical Board.

On a regular basis, the Council received help from Pamella Dana, Jesus Arredondo, Alan Friedman, Mitch Garbutt, Candy Place, Henry Tran, and Greg Watanabe (who converted the Council's report for posting on the website), each of the Trade and Commerce Agency, as well as June Wood of the California Department of Finance and Katherine Demos of the California Department of Information Technology. Helping us get the Council's work started and fully completed were Julia Justus, John Kabateck, Camden McEfee, and Karen Strickland, all of the Governor's Office.

We would also like to thank Margaret Block, as well as Virginia Bennett, Vina Patel, Eleanor Roberts, Virginia Rutherford, Connie Bergfeld, Frances Soto, Nicole Williams, and Karen Thorpe, who indispensably helped us keep the trains running on time.